GETTING AHEAD - Apply PVI Model for Career Advancement

The Roots of Becoming a More Effective Leader

If I had my way, any face-to-face leadership development program on the planet would first start with the facilitator showing a picture of General Sherman. No, not General William Tecumseh Sherman – military strategist and General of the Union Army during the United States Civil War in 1861 through 1865.

Life, Death, and Winning: Why Only One of Those Matters to Ted Turner

For all of his eventual entrepreneurial swagger and ruthless accumulation of wealth, Ted Turner has always been, deep inside, just another history nerd. When, as a teenager at Brown University, he informed his dad that he wanted to major in classics rather than business, the elder Turner savaged him in an eloquent note.

5 Things Job Candidates Obsess Over the Hiring Managers Don't Care About'

It doesn't matter how much work experience you have, or how many interviews you've knocked out of the park – job hunting is bound to make even the most confident candidates feel insecure. And since so many factors are out of your control – like whether you'll hear back about that perfect fit opportunity – it's no wonder many people find themselves attempting to regain a little power by obsessing over what they can control.

Quotes to Inspire

"Leadership is a matter of having people look at you and gain confidence, seeing how you react. If you're in control, they're in control."
~ Tom Landry

"One secret of success in life is for a man to be ready for his opportunity when it comes."
~ Benjamin Disraeli

"If you put all your strength and faith and vigor into a job and try to do the best you can, the money will come."
~ Lawrence Welk
